Despite the shut downs and restrictions that were in place during the early days of the pandemic, McMurry said the three clinics were able to remain fully operational and extended hours were offered at two locations, which allowed them to still serve 10,061 patients and meet the HRSA quality measures.

“We take care of a medically underserved population, so it was really important for us to be able to provide those extended hours of operations so our patients still had access to care,” McMurry said. “These awards are not location specific, but consist of the data for the three locations combined. We will continue to provide primary care and behavioral health care services, as well as COVID-19 testing and vaccines for our patients.”
